According to D. S. Hendricks, local agent, factory extensions which will ap-proximately double the facilities of the Saxon Motor Car Company have just been made. Two buildings, in addition to the present plant, will soon be occu-month.

The new Saxon factory additions will be used for small assembling work, the main factory building still being retained for final assembling. The present main building contains the most modern facilities known in automobile assembling, and further innovations will be introduced into the new additions.

duced into the new additions.

It was less than a year ago that the plant in which Saxon cars were first produced was abandoned. The present factory has 500 per cent more floor space than the original plant. The latest extensions have been the direct result of the phenomenal growth which the Saxon company has experienced in its annual volume of business.

volume of business.

Starting in a modest way, the Saxon company in eighteen months after the first car was shipped rose to a position of seventh among Detroit manufacturers and tenth among the automobile com-and tenth among the automobile com-panies of the world in annual number of cars shipped. The first appearance of Saxon cars was at the New York auto-mobile show in 1914, where they were ex-hibited on the fourth floor. At the 1915 show the Saxon exhibit moved down to the second floor because of the volume of business. At the recent show the ex-hibit was on the main floor in a promi-nent location. The position was award-ed on the basis of sales of cars.
